Travel recommendations:

Fly to Italy, then take the train:

The most comfortable option is to fly to Bologna. In the airport there is a very convenient train (Marconi Express, around 10 minutes frequency during "business hours": <https://www.marconiexpress.it/>) which takes you directly from the airport to Bologna main station (Bologna Centrale), where you can take direct trains to arrive in Trento in around 2 hours (see <https://www.trenitalia.com/en.html>).

There are also airports in Verona (although it is smaller and with fewer connections), Venezia and Milano (Milano-Bergamo-Orio al Serio or Milano-Linate are much better located than Milano-Malpensa). You can check the full list of airports below.

Either you fly to Verona, Venezia or Milano, you will have to take a train to Verona Porta Nuova station, where you will have to change trains to take another one to Trento (1-1.5 hours). You can check the full list of train stations below to plan your trip from these airports to Verona Porta Nuova, then to Trento (see <https://www.trenitalia.com/en.html>).

Fly to Innsbruck, then take the train / travel by train from Austria or from Germany:

Innsbruck airport is relatively close to Trento. From the airport, go to Innsbruck main train station (Innsbruck Hauptbahnhof) in order to take direct trains to arrive in Trento in around 2.5-3 hours (see <https://www.bahn.com/en>).

It is also possible to travel by train from Germany, for example from Munich main train station (München Hauptbahnhof) there are direct trains arriving to Trento in around 4-5h (see <https://www.bahn.com/en>).

In summary:

Best option:

Bologna → Trento

Others:

Verona/Venezia/Milano → Verona Porta Nuova → Trento

Innsbruck → Trento

Munich → Trento
